

The Ankh-Hor LMU Study Day

Monday, 12th October, 12.15-18.45pm (CET, via zoom)

This first study day of the LMU Ankh-Hor Project will run online using Zoom. Participation is free, but registration is mandatory. Participants may also attend just individual time slots.

Registration via: <https://eveeno.com/109463542>

The main aim of the study day is to introduce the lines of research currently carried out by the LMU project working on TT 414 in the Asasif, highlighting the potential of this monumental Late Period tomb for our general understanding of the Theban necropolis.

The excavator of TT 414 in the 1970s, Manfred Bietak, will present in a key lecture the discovery of the tomb.

Preliminary programme

12:15 Welcome and introduction

12:30 Manfred Bietak (Austrian Academy of Sciences), Discovering and excavating TT 414

13:15 Julia Budka (LMU Munich), The new Ankh-Hor Project

14:00 Veronica Hinterhuber (LMU Munich), The Theban cultic landscape during the Late Period

14:45 Break

15:00 Julia Budka (LMU Munich), Reconstructing the use-life of TT 414

15:45 Daniel Oberndorfer (Austrian Academy of Sciences), The conservation programme in TT 414 (tbc)

16:30 Break

16:45 Cajetan Geiger (LMU Munich), Applications of digital photography in TT 414

17:15 Patrizia Heindl (LMU Munich), Digital drawings and new ways of illustration in the Ankh-Hor project (working title)

17:45 Hassan Ramadan (SCA/HU Berlin), 3D-models of Egyptian tombs and their potential

18:15 Final discussion and closing